Program Description

The future is here. Are you ready? Just a few short months ago, only a limited number of cyber security professionals knew about ChatGPT. Now it's in the news every day, all over the internet, and a keynote topic at auditing, IT and management conferences all over the world. ChatGPT is an Artificial Intelligence program that engages in human dialog when prompted. So how do you know that the person you are speaking with is human or a machine? Also, ChatGPT can generate non-coded programs which could be almost undetectable by Security Software.

Join us for this fast-paced in-depth look at the potential benefits and enormous risks of ChatGPT and other Open-Source AI systems. Get your questions ready in advance – there's bound to be a long waiting list to ask them during the session.

Learning Objectives

- Understand Open-Source AI plus why and how it's different
- Review the vulnerabilities of Open-Source and challenges of patching identified exposures
- Explore why all Open-Source AI models including ChatGPT are implicitly biased – and the implications for organizations in all industries
- Explore recent case examples and harmful errors made by ChatGPT
- Analyze what to do to maximize the benefits and minimize the risks as ChatGPT and other Open-Source AI models come into the spotlight as everyday business tools

Who Should Attend

- Internal audit, government audit and similar professionals
- Compliance and loss prevention specialists
- Technology leaders in any organization
- Chief Risk Officers
- Full Board and Audit Committee members
- Certified Public Accountants and Chartered Accountants
- Certified Fraud Examiners
